1) That Thou might-est raise me, cast down to earth and fall-en,

Thou art come on earth, and, assuming me, dost lead me on high and glorifyest me with Thee on Thy Father's throne, dash-ing to earth all the conceit of him that had cast me down a-fore-time.

I sing hymns of praise to the un-fath- 'ma-ble abyss of Thy love for man, O Lord.

2) Skip for joy, O Adam; O Eve, make merry with him.

Ye who once in Paradise hoped for incorruption but were instead apparelled with corruption, have been transformed unto incorruption by your Maker Who ineffably assumed you and hath with Himself now raised you up and honored you today on His Father's throne.

3) Trampling down the enemy tyrant and apostate by His mighty divine, He that put on my nature without change nor confusion nor division, hath once again gone up with that nature to His Father: let heretics' long-winded nonsense retract far from us.

But let us magnify Him now, ye faithful, with pious mind.
